WISCONSIN STATE COLLEGE, RIVER FALLS

VOLUME XLIII

NO. 11

River Falls First to Send Student Delegate to NCTE

River Falls State will be the first college in the U. S. to send a student delegate to the annual convention for the National Council of Teachers of English. Al Forsythe, president of the local chapter, will accompany Dr. Francis Chisholm to the convention in St. Louis, Mo., next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

The NCTE is composed of English teachers on the secondary and college level. The group's first Junior Affiliate chapter in the nation was started here two years ago. Since then, several colleges have organized similar groups.

While at the convention, the two River Falls delegates will hear talks and take part in discussions on the main topic, "A Man's Reach Should Exceed His Grasp." Some of the meeting's other discussion subjects are, "A Clarification of Our Goals," "Exploration of Specific Problems Confronting Us," and "Identifying Professional Resources and Illustrating Professional Know-how."

Speakers who will address the convention's more than 5,000 delegates include: Wallace Stegner, from Stanford University; Thomas Hall, of Washington University; Paul Engle, poet and teacher, and Hiram Haydn, member of the American Book Publishers Council.

Meetings of the local NCTE usually feature general discussion periods and talks by River Falls alumni who are now teaching English.

Mr. Forsythe says, "We're interested mainly in dealing with practical problems of teaching. We want to work out some of the difficulties now, before we actually encounter them in the field."

A senior from River Falls, Mr. Forsythe is majoring in English and has minors in physical education and history.

Role of Women in U.S., Europe Is AWS Topic

An expected 75 women at tonight's Associated Women Student's Thanksgiving Banquet will hear the main speaker discuss, "The Role of European Women as Compared and Contrasted with the American Woman." The AWS have scheduled the meal for 5:45 in the Glen Park Lodge.

Speaking on American and European women will be Mrs. W. H. Marzolf from Hudson. The speaker is writing a book, to be published soon, on her experiences while touring Europe and Russia during the past summer.

Next Issue of 'Who's Who' To List 16 From College

This year's publication of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges will include 16 River Falls State seniors. To be listed with the leading students from every school of higher education throughout the U. S. are the following persons: Marilyn Carlson, Beverly Domaika, Bob Dykstra, Noel Falkofske, Laura Gardner, Roger Hanson, Julia Kaminski, Don Laue, Shirley Luebker, Carla Nordeen, Richard Pederson, Elvera Petersen, Herbert Seidmore, Ardis Shannon, James Sparks, and Don Weiss.

Students listed in Who's Who are chosen on leadership characteristics and scholastic achievement. According to B. J. Rozehnal, dean of students, the annual publication is, "A nationwide recognition of outstanding college seniors." The number of persons named from each school is determined on the basis of enrollment.

A total of 29 candidates were picked from the senior class by the Student Senate. The list of prospects was then submitted to the faculty personnel committee who chose the final 16 top students.

The new members of Who's Who will be officially recognized with a scroll during next spring's Honors Day.

Dean Rozehnal said that equal emphasis was placed on academic and leadership ability in choosing the finalists. The seniors, all enrolled in education, are listed below with their extra-curricular activities since starting school.

Forensic Group Rated 'Superior,' 'Excellent' Except for Debate

All nine River Falls students who attended the Bradley Tournament at Peoria, Ill., Friday and Saturday received certificates for superior or excellent ratings. Participating with 72 other colleges and universities in one of the largest tournaments in the nation, the local group in its overall record with the exception of debate, took top honors along with the host school.

Walter Simonson, forensics coach, pointed out that the nine local students showed great versatility, equaling the record of approximately 30 students from Bradley.

Arlen Christenson was one of three in the tournament to receive ratings of "superior" in more than one event. There were more than 400 persons taking part in the meet.

Mr. Christenson and Mary Lou Jensen received ratings of "superior" in extemporaneous speaking. "Excellent" ratings were awarded Sonja Rasmussen and Ron Losness. Each discussed some phase of U. S. foreign aid.

His other "superior" rating came to Mr. Christenson in discussion. Receiving "excellent" ratings in this event were Earl Adams, Richard Doetkott, Mary

VOICE STILLED UNTIL DEC. 10

The next issue of The Student Voice will be published December 10, following Thanksgiving vacation and final examinations.

The Editor Speaks . . .

Our congratulations are extended to the 16 River Falls Seniors named to Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities. An award of this type should be doubly gratifying to its recipients. For the distinction is earned not by a concentrated effort in just one direction or field, but rather through sincere work and dedication in a variety of activities. These persons have managed to take part in a full extra-curricular program and at the same time, earn a high grade-point average. A rundown of their activities should convince anyone that they are not "grinds," merely good students.

The RF Who's Who members and the others throughout the country are examples of persons who have exhibited the opportunities of higher education. They have taken advantage of college and campus life for personal gain. And eventually, it will be the nation and the world who will gain because of this.

We were told in last Tuesday's Education Week convo that both leaders and followers are needed in today's world. These students have been, and can be, both leaders and followers. The combination of big and little skills mentioned by Dr. McCune becomes even more valuable when combined in one person.

It seems probable that these 16 students would be among the few who can give some "real" reasons for wanting to be teachers. They have not had "The living daylights regimented out of them," as have many products of current education systems, according to Dr. McCune.

Their ability and initiative serve as an example of the student that America's schools can turn out. Unfortunately however, this type of student is in the minority. These persons have not been indoctrinated with their instructor's prejudices, but have been taught to think and question.

The capabilities of these seniors has been measured, not by I. Q. tests, but in their actual accomplishments, by their associations with students and faculty. The ability to get along with other persons and to cope with reason with different situations is the actual and final measuring stick for everyone. Our success in life will depend on the facility to reason; to use the facts gained during our education in reasoning rather than using memorized knowledge in solving our problems.

Dr. McCune pointed out a major fault of the country's schools when he said, "We make everyone jump over the same hurdle at the same time." Much current education resembles a huge mill, turning out graduates at a regular rate. The chaff and coarse chunks are sorted out and from this, we are supposed to get an educated public.

CRITICS CORNER —

by Julia Kaminski

The movie, The "Private" Life of Henry VIII, was very aptly titled. Although it may have been a close documentary of a portion of the colorful English King's life, the picture was certainly no understatement of the facts. It painted a rather bawdy picture of royal life in general during the 16th century, perhaps to the extent that the audience was merely amused by the vulgarity. A more representative picture of the King's life might have been shown, had the film been less "sensational."

The movie, however, did feature some very fine acting along with some not-so-fine. Charles Laughton was unquestionably good as the roaring King. He got progressively better throughout the hour and a half. He reached his high point in the scene showing him as the aged Monarch being pampered by his sixth wife.

Another acting peak was reached in the scene leading up to the divorce of King Henry from wife number four, Anne of Cleves. This scene showed the newly-married couple sitting in bed playing cards. She purposely became so obnoxious that he was only too happy to divorce her.

In the not-so-fine department one was often reminded of the late, late shows on television. This was due in part to weak transitions and repetitious crowd scenes. Some of the effectiveness was lost through overly-long scenes such as the series of switches from Henry's soon-to-be wife and his soon-to-be beheaded wife. The incongruity of their juxtaposition was almost lost in the long trip of hand-wringing and hair-fixing. It was, however, recaptured somewhat when the two women, one on the block and the other in her bedroom, said almost simultaneously, "What a lovely day."

This film served well to point out the change of photography style since it was made about 15 years ago. As in the rest of the movie, there were some good points and some bad ones about the photography. Foreground materials were used effectively to frame the main action in many scenes. The use of dates on buildings or arches to prove that a period of time had passed became distracting at times, however.

Music Notes

by Glen Sandve

The College Choir, under the direction of C. B. King, will present its annual Christmas Concert on Monday, Dec. 17. It has been scheduled for 8 p.m. in the North Hall auditorium.

The 40-voice mixed choir has selected a group of sacred songs for the concert. When asked about the program, Mr. King said, "We try to keep our Christmas presentation as simple and sincere as possible." He added, "This is due partly to the prevailing commercialism present in Christmas music."

A mixed vocal octet, made up of choir members, will also perform at the concert. The group can sing folk and madrigal selections as a unit or as male and female quartets.

Probably one the least used rooms on campus is the music listening room on the second floor of the library. High fidelity equipment, worth several hundred dollars, is included in the room.

A number of good symphonic works are on file in the library for use in the room. Orchestral scores are provided with many of the selections. The collection would probably be enlarged if students exhibited more interest in its use.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

by Dick Bibler

"REMEMBER - I SAID THE TEST WOULD BE OVER CLASS DISCUSSIONS!"

GAD BOOKS!

HAGESTAD

There is a hard lesson that everyone who reads, reviews, or criticizes books must learn. It is worthwhile to include it here, for it has some relevance to this week's book. It is simply:

You cannot judge a book of fiction either favorably or unfavorably because of the people in it.

In other words, the people in a book don't, in themselves, provide grounds for any sort of criticism of that book. Now if the characters in a story are unreal, that is, are not conceivable persons (and that's very hard to determine), then one has grounds for comment. And if the people in a piece of fiction don't move or develop logically, don't act as circumstances dictate, then again, one has grounds for comment. But if the people in a book are wholly good or wholly bad, and you don't happen to like the people who are wholly good or wholly bad, you don't, for that reason, have grounds for judgement of that book.

Maritta Wolff's book, The Big Nickleodean (Random House, 373 pages, $3.95), is full of people who, are, to my mind's eye, wholly bad. I should qualify that: the people in this book are people I would not like to be connected with in any way. They are people laboring under what they, themselves consider the pall of divorce. They are people who, to the last man, have in their lives accumulated a series of entirely traumatic experiences. They are people caught in what this book calls "the insidious web of the motion picture industry." They are people who have these things in their lives, and they are people who have been made nasty by them.

The people in this book are plausible and the events, conditions, and actions of the characters are also plausible. Author Wolff's book is a convincing one, and as far as I know, probably very true.

Here is the situation then: real, seeable people, but nasty and really somewhat loathsome; logical, true events and conditions, but by their nature and characteristics of being insidious and traumatic, these events and conditions make the characters what they are.

Now why can't I simply call this book bad and nasty like the characters in it and be done with the whole thing? That wouldn't be true, nor would it be honest to the book. I can't call this book (I make a distinction between the book and the book's characters) bad for a reason that is really very simple.

People are what they are largely because of circumstance, or necessity, called variously "fate," "the Hand of God," etc.

David Hume, in the 18th century and Lionel Trilling, in this century, have put it another way.

The things that happen to people are soon translated by those people into their own actions.

The people in author Wolff's book are rather ordinary people, trying to be happy, trying to live meaningful lives, and trying not to be trampled under by this "fate," or whatever you want to call it.

But they don't succeed; they embrace necessity, and therefore eat the fatal apple that leaves them defenseless to fate. This "fate" certainly does attack them, and makes out of them the semi-monsters that they are.

The book, though its author probably didn't intend it to be, is an excellent exposition of this process whereby just ordinary people are transformed from Jekyll to Hyde by the force of circumstance.

I might add that this business of judging books on the basis of their "goodness" or "badness" doesn't just stop with books. A realization of the force of circumstance and what it can do to people can perhaps give a more mature cast to each of our judgements of people and the circumstances that affect them.

Four Falcons on All-Conference Team; Steffen Leads Small College Scoring

John Steffen, senior halfback and regular starter for the Falcons for the past four years, completed the 1956 season and his college football career leading the nation's small college scorers and ranking third in individual total offense.

His total of 111 points for eight games put him on top, according to figures released from the NAIA Statistical Bureau dated for the week ending November 3. The total is compiled on John's 14 touchdowns and 27 conversions for an average of 13.9 points per game. In 1955, he tallied 42 points with six TDs and as many points after touchdown.

In total offense, here are the statistics compared to last year when Steffen finished fourth in the final national standings.

Rushing yards	871	859
Passing yards	325	360
Net total gain	1196	1219
Game ave.	149.5	154.4

John also ranked seventh in the individual rushing department.

STEFFEN

He netted a total of 871 yards in 177 carries to average 4.9 per try and 108.9 yards a game.

In accordance with this outstanding record, the team has named John as their Most Valuable Player for the second year in a row.

Four seniors from the Falcon football squad of 1956 were chosen to the northern all-conference team at a meeting of the schools in the Wisconsin State College Conference held at Stevens Point, last Thursday. The four players are: end Bill Kraft, tackle Bob Koplun, center Ron Wunrow, and left halfback John Steffen, all of whom will not be returning next year. Coaches Phil Belfiori and Fran Polsfoot represented River Falls at the meeting.

Completing the 14-member team are:

Bob Hessler, fullback; Jim Bolinger, quarterback; Don Pierce, tackle; and Don Gudmanson, guard; all from Eau Claire.

Also named were: Don Kollath, end; Jerry Luteman, guard; and Dennis Dalke, guard; from La Crosse.

Stout players picked for all-conference include: Gus Tepp, center; and Bill Romoser, right halfback.

George St. Catherine, right halfback from Superior State was also chosen for the team.

This was the second consecutive all-conference award for Wunrow, Steffen, and Kraft.

Polsfoot Lists Cage Starters

Basketball Coach Fran Polsfoot, in the third week of practice, has named his tentative starting five around which he plans to center most of the practice in forming a smooth working unit. The five include forwards John Steffen, 5-10, senior, and Griff Howell, 6-3 sophomore; center, Dave Herum, 6-5, senior; and guards Dan Corcoran, 6-1, sophomore, and Dick Fischer, 5-10, a senior.

Second Team

Forwards: Tom Shield, 6-3, sophomore, and Phil Kuss, 6-0, senior.

Center: Tom Marshall, 6-3, freshman.

Guards: Vern Parker, 5-10 and Mick Lauber, 6-1, both freshmen.

Third Team

Forwards: Darrel Hart, 6-3, freshman, and Jack Omer, 5-10, freshman.

Center: Ken Thomas, 6-5, senior.

Guards: Emery Crowley, 5-8, freshman, and Tom Larson, 5-10, sophomore.

Rounding out the list of those still out as of last Monday were these 13 freshmen:

Forwards: Harvey Hoefs, Tom Benoy, Dale Henning, Don Trier, Gene Johnson and Vern Ellefson.

Centers: Jerry Wittstach, Duane Crank and John Dahler.

Guards: Jim Eisenhuth, Jack Neuer, Jim Landry and Milan Brecka.

Polsfoot notes that Herum and Marshall looked especially good on offense, both scoring and rebounding well. He adds that Fischer has been doing a good all-around job on both offense and defense.

The Falcons open their season against Augsburg at home on Wednesday, November 28. An afternoon scrimmage with Macalaster, there, is tentatively planned for Monday, November 26.

Intramural Basketball Set to Begin Dec. 10 With 36 Teams Playing

The intramural basketball season is slated to begin Dec. 10, it was decided at a meeting of the team representatives and program director Fran Polsfoot last week. The complete lists of players on each team are posted on the intramural bulletin board outside the coaches' office in North Hall.

The 36 teams will compete on Monday through Thursday nights, with games scheduled for 6, 7, 8, and 9 o'clock each evening.

The I-M ping pong championship tournament will be held tonight, beginning at 6:30 in the Student Activity Center of South Hall. The list of pairings is also listed on the bulletin board in North Hall. Matches will be forfeited if one of the participants fails to show up.

Faculty, Students Hear Minnesota Prof Inquire Into Teaching Methods, Aims

Dr. George McCune, last Tuesday's convocation speaker, said, "We make the future by default if we let things ride in the teaching field." Part of the National Education Week observance on campus, the all-student assembly in North Hall aud. heard Dr. McCune, a University of Minnesota education prof, ask several questions during the hour-long lecture:

1. "Why do you want to be a teacher?"
2. "Should the public demand that high schools offer college preparatory programs or stress vocational training?"
3. "What are your aims after getting a teaching degree?"

4. "How much conformity and individual differences in students can a teacher allow?"

Posing another query in reply to his first question, what are your reasons for wanting to be a teacher? Dr. McCune asked, "What for, so you can regiment kids." He continued, very few students would say, I don't know. Most teacher-trainees would probably give several reasons learned in their education courses, he added. It is important to attempt to find out the "real" answer for this question before starting to teach, the education prof said.

On the problem of what should be stressed in current high school programs, Dr. McCune noted that we need both vocational and college preparatory courses. He said a choice between the two must be made by studying the needs of each school's locality. He added, there is a "blind spot" in any education program that sets up the verbiage, academic, and abstract skills as being all-important.

"We have big skills and little skills, and both kinds are needed," Dr. McCune said. He continued, education only for students with high intelligence quotas is not the answer to the controversy over vocational versus academic training.

Calling student differences a matter of "range and rate of growth," Dr. McCune said, "It is foolish to make all students jump over the same hurdles at the same time." He cautioned teachers against "giving up" on any student. One of education's major duties is to adjust and stimulate a student's range and rate of growth, he added.

According to Dr. McCune, one of the most important questions in the field of education is, "How much conformity and individual differences can today's teachers allow?" If this question isn't answered, he claims that society will be in a "perilous position."

In the afternoon, the local faculty was host to teachers from the River Falls high school and from St. Bridget's school at a coffee hour in the Social Room.

Addressing the combined group on "Professional Self-evaluation," Dr. McCune used the Latin word peccavi (I have sinned) and the Greek phrase, a martia (short of the mark), as the basis for his remarks.

Teachers, he said, must evaluate their efforts constantly and realize that they frequently have failed to do what should have been done and have done things they ought never to have done. In addition, he said, they sometimes set their goals at impossible distances — such distances that they must inevitably fall short. Dr. McCune continued, "When a large number of failing grades are given in a class, an instructor should look to his methods."

"In the final analysis, however, the teacher himself is the best judge of the kind of job he is doing," Dr. McCune said.

Post Office Needed, Says Graham's Class

Dr. Graham's Contemporary Civilization class, section 4, is circulating petitions for a new city post office. Anyone using post office facilities is eligible to sign one of the documents.

The class feels that a new city post office building will add to the city's appearance and facilitate mail service. They urged students not to sign more than one petition.

Senate to Plan Meeting Dates

A rescheduling of campus organization meeting times and dates will be made by the Student Senate at the beginning of next term. The plan covers clubs that now have regular meeting times and groups that do not have, but desire one.

All organizations wanting a permanent meeting time and date are asked by the Senate to submit a written request before noon on next Monday. If conflicts develop on the schedule, representatives from the organization concerned will be invited to meet with the Senate and work out a compromise.

According to Dick Schultz, student senate president, the new schedule will be strictly followed. He said the plan is aimed at reducing the present confusion over scheduling meetings.
