The Violet.

One of our early spring flowers is the violet which usually comes in the last part of April or the first part of May, and stays with us until July and August. It is not a bold flower like the pasque flower or dandelion, but always hides modestly in a clump of its own leaves, in the taller grass or in some fence corner. I don't know whether it has any preference as to these locations but I think I have found the largest and finest ones in the fence-corners. There are three varieties of violets, the blue, the white and the yellow. The white ones are smaller than either of the other kinds and are much more fragrant. These violets seem to prefer a wet marshy place where it costs the flower-hunter a little trouble and perhaps wet feet, to gather them. The yellow violet is about the same size as the blue violet and usually chooses for its home, the side of some cool stream. I think of the three kinds the blue violet is the best known and the general favorite. Poets always speak of the "blue-eyed violet" but we never hear them mention the white or yellow eyed one. One of them has written this of the violet;

Down in a deep and shady bed
A modest violet grew;
Its stalk was bent, it hung its head
As if to hide from view.

And yet, it was a lovely flower,
Its color bright and rare
It might have graced a prince's

[bower]

Instead of hiding there,
Yet there it was content to bloom
In modest tints arrayed
And there it shed its sweet perfume
Within the leafy shade.

O let me to the valley go
The violet fair to see
That I may learn like it to grow
In sweet humility.

The Anemone.

The coming of spring and of these beautiful days makes us think of the early spring flowers that must be coming too. One of the frailest of these is the anemone, the name being a Greek word meaning wind-flower because it is so easily shaken by the wind. I have always found it growing in moist, shady places, on the north side of mounds where scarcely a ray of light can reach. It seems as though the little flower must have to work hard to make its way through such a thick layer of leaves, but it immediately opens its petals as if it were glad to see the light again. The flower is of the most delicate hue usually white, sometimes pink. Some one who knows how to appreciate it has written this little poem about it;

Little Anemone
So frail and so fair,
Blossoming so brave
In the cold spring air.

Sweet little messenger
Coming to tell,
Sun and is here
And all will be well.

Out of the darkness
Springing to life,
So brave tho' so tiny
Mids't this great world of strife.

Standing so firm
 Tho' swayed by the breeze,
 Seeming to say
 By its pure petaled leaves.
 Out of the darkness
 Shall come forth light,
 God in his wisdom
 Has made day and night.

The Blood Root.

Growing at the foot of large trees in the damp and some-what dark woods, or in some obscure nook on the banks of a rippling stream, about this time of the year, is often seen, peeping out from the surrounding shrubs and early foliage, the pure white face of a little flower, known as the blood root.

Though this member of the flower family is the choice of few children, though it does not rank in beauty or delicacy with many of our other flowers, such as the rose which is the queen of flowers, or the lily which is the one and only flower that can dispute the queenship of the rose, or the violet which cheers the weary traveler by her little up-turned, innocent, blue face, though the blood root ranks with none of these, she has her mission, and should not be overlooked, and I fear she would feel slighted if we did not pause and devote to her a portion of our time.

The blood root has a fibrous root, and a red root stalk. Its stem which grows from six to eight inches high, is smooth with a groove in one side. It has a dark green, net veined leaf, horse-shoe shaped, and three lobed. The flower itself consists of a calyx of two sepals, a white corolla of petals varying in number from six to ten, of innumerable yellow headed stamens, and a pistil. The flower dies down every year, but the root stalk lives a number of years, and is sometimes used as a medicine.

One obnoxious characteristic of the blood root, is the bloody liquid which oozes from its stem and root, when they are broken or injured.

But after all I believe she is a good little flower with her white face and heart of gold, and if we should go into the woods upon the flower's Sabbath day I feel certain we would find Miss Blood Root assembled with her brother and sister reverently listening to a flowery sermon from Jack-in-the-pulpit.

Let us take a lesson from this little flower which God has given us among the rest, and be found in dark places if duty calls us there;

And if glory and renown
 Refuse to make us known the world around,
 Let us be, with a quiet life content,
 And always be found, to duty bound,
 And not to evil bent.

AMERICAN RUFFED GROUSE.

How the Young Birds Secrete Themselves
 When the Mother Is Alarmed.

Madison, Wis., April 21.—In a recent paper Prof. F. H. King, agricultural physicist in the state university, discusses the ruffed grouse in a very entertaining manner. He writes:

“Do you know the ruffed grouse, called by some the partridge and by others the pheasant? It is found in the woodlands and large groves throughout the eastern portions of North America from the gulf states to Nova Scotia and from the Atlantic border to the Rocky mountains. It is a large, handsome, stately bird, with legs closely feathered down nearly to the toes, for, unlike the robin and the bluebird, it stays with us the winter through and when the severe cold waves, which so frequently follow our heavy falls of snow, sweep across us it has learned to plunge deeply beneath the fresh, soft drifts for shelter from those bitter, biting blasts which we with all our wealth of clothing, shelter and fuel, find it so hard to combat.

“Perhaps you can recall one of those warm, still April mornings, when the sun, not yet an hour high, is sending its strange power sifting through the soft air and you feel as though everything is being wound up until quiet is no longer possible. The old ewe, impelled by the instincts of motherhood, stands calling her twins, but the lambs can't hold still long enough for breakfast; the calf is racing about the yard, the rooster is cackling for the hen which has accomplished the most important task of the day, while the old turkey gobbler, with tail outspread and wings cutting the ground, has forced the red blood into his distended wattles until his face is blue. With all of this life and stir there comes across the pasture from the meadow the booming sounds of a group of prairie chickens, and in another direction, from forty acres of woodland, the drumming of a partridge, like the low roll of distant thunder, comes in to mingle its rhythm with this early chorus of spring, which is to run on through shades and tints of green to the bright colors and sweet fragrance of early summer, until the ripe grains and rich fruits of autumn are the final results.

Possibly you have walked along some by-path through the woods, when your attention was arrested first by slow, measured beats quickly increasing in frequency until their succession became so rapid that the ear was no longer able to distinguish the separate sounds and you recognized the drum-like roll of the ruffed grouse, made by no other species. Some times these sounds have a strange ventriloquistic effect and you start out in quest of the bird, thinking that he is eighty rods or more away, and before you have covered a distance of fifty yards he has risen with a whirr from his stand, startling you more than you frightened him. Then again the sounds may seem to you very close by and yet the bird is a long distance off, so that as you try to follow up the sounds they appear to come from points which advance as you move forward.

“If you are persistent in your search and carry it to a successful issue, you will find the male bird, with tail and ruff on the neck widely spread, with feathers fluffed and wings down, strutting much after the manner of the turkey gobbler. After strutting about for a time the feathers are quickly folded, the head and tail dropped, and while the bird lowers its body upon its legs it begins whipping its wings much as a rooster does preparatory to crowing, but with increasing speed until they move so rapidly as to look like a whirr in the air. The drumming stands are usually selected in some open spot on a stone or stump. These open sightly places are chosen evidently in order that the prospective mate whose admiration he hopes to win may have ample opportunity to observe how skillful and how handsome he really is.

“But one of the most interesting traits of the ruffed grouse is the forethought and intelligence exhibited by both the mother and her chicks when they are in real or apparent danger, and I shall always admire the species for the exhibition which a mother and her babies once gave at a time when the writer was an unintentional intruder. My pathway to and from school led through forty acres of woodland, in which a partridge had built her nest and hatched a brood of a dozen downy chicks. These, as soon as they are hatched, are strong enough to leave the nest and run about as young domestic chickens do, and it happened one afternoon, on my way home from school, that in the pathway I was brought suddenly upon the family without being discovered until the birds were less than twenty feet away. The ground was overstrewn with the dry leaves of the red oak, but the mother was in the path with the whole brood by her side. The moment my presence was discovered she began fluttering about the ground in the wildest sort of manner, covering a circle more than twenty feet in diameter, first coming straight towards me to within a distance of ten feet, and then retreating again, all the time calling as an alarmed hen with a brood of chickens will, and at the same time raising the dry leaves in the air with the strong strokes of her wings. This fluttering was kept up during a full minute, when all of a sudden the bird rose upon the wing and with a quick whirr was off out of sight, leaving everything a dead silence and not a chicken anywhere to be seen, and yet ten or a dozen of them were hidden there within a radius of less than twenty feet. I waited for a time, to see if some little fellow would not become impatient and come out of his hiding place to see where his mother was, but not a peep or a stir could I hear. I then resolved to find the little fellows, but after laying aside my books and dinner basket a search of twenty minutes on my hands and knees, turning over leaves, had passed before the first little chick was found. Can you guess how he had hidden himself? The little fellow was in a very amusing attitude and you would have laughed could you have seen him. Lying flat upon his side or nearly on his back, with both eyes shut, he was holding over himself a brown oak leaf, grasping its opposite edges with his tiny claws.

“I took the leaf away from the little fellow, but he neither opened his eyes or made a motion. He was feigning death and if I moved a limb or rolled him over he would make no sign of life, but lay as limp and motionless as a lifeless bird. Taking my pencil from my pocket, I gently but steadily thumped him with it on the head. He stood this for a minute, then opened his eyes, peeped and jumped and ran, hiding himself a second time in the same manner as I had found him first. His eyes were shut; he lay nearly upon his back and was grasping a dry oak leaf at both edges with his feet, holding it closely over him. Curious to see what the little fellow would do, I took the leaf from him a second time. He lay still there as dead as a live bird could be, and it was only after I thumped him with a pencil that he opened his eyes, peep-d and ran on to hide a third time in the same manner.

"But when the little fellow was discovered and uncovered the third time he seemed to give it up as of no use and walked about peeping for his mother's return.

"I did not dare to hunt longer for other chicks for fear of stepping on and crushing the life out the little babes, who had hidden to stay until they heard their mother's voice, let come what would, and I gathered up my things and hurried away, for I suspected the mother was on her way back to her brood, but would not come until all signs of danger had disappeared. What shall we say of the mental action of this mother bird and of her little chicks? If a human mother, with her family of little children, had been suddenly confronted with such a danger and had she decided and acted with such precision, and with such bravery, and had her children one and all so quickly understood what she told them to do and hidden themselves with such adroitness and effectiveness as the young partridges did, I for one, would accord to the mother a wonderful strength and presence of mind, and to the children a readiness of comprehension and faith in and fidelity to their mother that was nothing short of sublime.—l x.

The cover design of this month's issue is the work of Miss Alma Olson of the Grammar grade. There were twenty-five who entered the contest for the prize offered by the BADGER last month. Of these only twelve, handed in designs. There was little difference in the merits of five of them but after due deliberation the first prize was awarded to Miss Olson and the second, kindly offered by Pres. Parker was awarded to Raymond Ensign, also of the Grammar Grade.

This month we make a change in the form of our paper. While we have all along felt the desirability of publishing the paper in this form we have been unable owing to financial reasons to make the change before. Now that we have made the change and have taken the greater risks financially it is to be hoped that the old students and graduates will give us a better support. There is a certain class of people who criticise and offer suggestions for the bettering of the paper but when asked to help to make it better by lending aid through subscription refuse because the paper is as it is. Let us hope that they may see the folly of their course and atone for past conduct by becoming subscribers.

To our advertisers, we wish to say, in the change of form which our paper has undergone it was imperative that we rearranged the advertising. In this we have not only striven to give you your just dues but have tried to make this department more artistic and we feel confident the new arrangement will prove far more satisfactory to all. If you desire any modifications or changes made for June drop us a line and we will willingly comply with your wishes if possible. We wish also, in this connection, to most cordially thank those who have thus loyally supported us the past year. Our advertising patronage compares very favorably with other school and college papers notwithstanding the fact that River Falls is a comparatively small city. We are now so situated that another year's publication of the paper is insured and we feel confident that advertising in the BADGER next year will bring better returns than ever.

The Student's Hand Book, which we mentioned in our last issue, has made its appearance. It is a neat little book 3 by 7 inches and containing 36 pages. The book was issued by the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. of the Normal, and is devoted to the general interest of the students. It contains a cut of the Normal building and one of the museum. Other things of interest are; officers of the associations, Normal faculty, work of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A., Church Directory of the city, facts about the school, as, library, directory of the building, calender for 1896—97, Athletic Club, Literary Society, Normal Badger hints, things to be remembered, pointers, R. R. time table, places in town at which board and rooms may be secured, and last but not least, advertisements of the leading business men of the city where students may at any time receive bargains. Each student is entitled to one of these books. Extra copies may be had at five cents each. If you have friends who will soon attend the Normal, leave their names with any officer of the association and a Hand Book will be sent them.

A run-away horse caused a little excitement during the base ball game May 11th.

Prof. Briggs of the Oshkosh Normal spent Apr. 23 and 24 at our school.

C. A. Sjolander of LaCrosse visited our city and school during the first week of May. He was the guest of Mr. Needham.

H. H. Smith, Elementary Class '81, gladdened our hearts the other day by sending us in a dollar bill for two years subscription. Thank you, Mr. Smith. Would there were many more like you.

May 1st., being Arbor day, the opening exercises were composed of talks on flowers by first year students. They were Misses Irle, Deans, Whitcomb, Annis, and Stapleton. The talks were interesting and well rendered.

Prof. L. H. Clark visited the Stout Manual Training School at Menomonie May 7 and 8. He brought with him on his return, specimens of work done by students. He also gave us an interesting talk on the work done at the school.

At a recent meeting of the board of regents of Normal Schools a one year's course was established for the benefit of those wishing to make better preparation for teaching in the country schools. This will afford opportunity for those who cannot stay to complete the elementary or full course and will increase the benefits of Normal training to the country schools.

Prof. W. J. Brier and Miss Shultes conducted an institute at Mondovi, Buffalo Co. Friday and Saturday May 8 and 9.

A. H. Lovell, formerly a student of this school, is located here as field manager for the Matthews-Northrup Co. He is desirous of securing Normal students to canvas during the coming vacation for a work intitled "Best Fifty Books of the Greatest Authors." It is a work of inestimable value and the company offers excellent inducement to solicitors. Mr. Lovell may be seen at any time in his office in the City Hotel.

Mr. Barber from Madison was at the Normal consulting and instructing students regarding the organization of a prohibition club. As a result of this a meeting was called May 8th. and an Intercollegiate Prohibition Club was organized and the following officers elected: Pres., W. N. Hedback; Vice Pres., Ralph Cummins; Sec., Fred Thompson; Treas., Frank Sloniker; Executive Committee, W. N. Hedback, Geo. Sanford, and Geo. Vann.

At a meeting of the Board of Normal School Regents held May 7th. Prof. I. H. McNeal of Kansas City was elected president of the new Normal School at Superior. There were no other candidates in the field. Mr. McNeil has held many positions of note in the educational field and comes highly recommended by some of the greatest educators of our country. He is at present assistant superintendent of schools of Kansas City and treasurer of the National Educational Association.

Athletics.

The base-ball team has finally settled down into something of a regular organization. The first game of the season was played Monday afternoon, May 4, against the High School team. The High School team were victors by a score of 12 to 11. This was no more than could be expected as the men had not once been together for practice. The Normal boys were unusually weak at the bat. A second game was played Monday afternoon, May 11. The week intervening between the two games had given some opportunity for practice and the Normal boys succeeded in winning from the High School by a score of 16 to 11. The batting of the team has improved considerably although much of the field work is still disgracefully weak.

Pitcher Purves is still nursing his arm so that the score was much larger than usual where he pitches against a team of the batting strength of the High School team. By another game his arm will probably be in good shape, when it is safe to predict that the score will be lowered considerably. The make-up of the team is as follows;

- C. Purves, Pitcher.
- W. F. Lusk, Catcher.
- E. Shepard, First Base.
- J. D. O'Keefe, Second Base.
- H. Raymond, Third Base.
- C. Love, Short Stop.
- F. Slonker, Left Field.
- D. H. Clough, Center Field.
- Bisner, Right Field.

Arrangements are being made for a tennis tournament. The names of all wishing to enter should be handed to the President as early as possible that the drawings may be made. The tennis men have been doing considerable work this spring, so a lively tournament may be expected, provided the interest is kept up. Last year the matches dragged so much that the interest flagged and the tournament dropped through.

The time for each match should be definitely set and failure to appear should be punished by forfeiture of the match. A supply of new balls has been ordered and the tournament will probably open as soon as they come.

Menomonie, Eau Claire and New Richmond High Schools have declined to accept the challenge of the Athletic club to compete in field sports, so that there will be no competition along this line this year.

Mr. O'Keefe carrying home his senior name.

The greatest musical treat that River Falls has received within the past year was decidedly that given by the Scottish-American Quartett in the Congregational church, Friday and Saturday evenings, May 8 and 9. The program, consisting of solos, duets, quartettes, violin and piano solos and dramatical readings, was rendered most pleasingly in all its parts. The quartette was the main feature of the entertainment and its ability is certainly deserving of highest praise. The audience manifested their appreciation by repeated applause and calls for encores. "The Twilight Bells" and "Cuckoo Song" were in our judgment the happiest selections. The harmony of the quartett is perfect and the voices of the individual members sweet and exquisitely melodious. It is to be regretted that this most deserving entertainment of the season did not receive a larger audience from River Falls, which is so well known in this part of the state for its appreciation of the musical and literary works.

The gentlemen of the Senior Class have organized a quartette for the purpose of indulging their surplus musical talent. They are hard at work practicing appropriate songs. The quartette is made up as follows;

H. B. Wentz Tenor.
 J. D. O'Keeffe Baritone.
 W. F. Lusk Bass.
 E. W. Waite Basso-profundo.
 John Thompson, Organist and Director.

Elementary Class Tree Planting.

It was on Arbor day, May 1st, 1896, at four o'clock A. M. and if one had been standing out in the street in front of the Normal campus, he might have seen approaching in the gray dawn from different directions, some carrying spades and some shovels, the members of the Elementary Class. After some discussion a hole was dug in which to plant a tree just inside the hedge and almost opposite the very front of the school house. All was now ready but no tree was to be found' when it was decided to call upon "six witches." These old (young) women conducted the class to where some small cuttings of the silver maple were hidden, and some of the witches made such great predictions about those little cuttings that they induced the class to plant them very carefully. After the tree planting the president called the class together and announced that there would be a short program given under the directions of Mr. Walter Leonard.

The exircises were;

Song.... "The Class it had a little tree"By Class.

Dedicatory Address....O. Needham.

Oration.....Wm. Hedback.

Tree Propheisies, By six Young Ladies.

Talk.....W. Leonard.

Remarks....Pres. Wm. Rendiger.

Song.....Rally Round our Tree

.....By Class.

The meeting then adjourned to meet "under the class tree" at 5. P. M. From the class tree the class took up the line of march in a drizzling rain to the home of Mrs. F. B. Webster where things had been appropriately arranged for spending the time pleasantly. At six o'clock Mrs. Webster led us all into the dinning room, where a table loaded with good things and entwined with flowers awaited us. Course after course and dish after dish was brought on before those twenty Normal appetites were subdued. After an hour of eating, laughing, and toasting, the company arose and voted that they had never spent a pleasanter time than the two hours at Mrs. Webster's.

Exchange.

The School News has an especially fine issue for March in commemoration of the dedication of a new school building.

Little Willie from his mirror
Sucked the mercury all off,
Thinking, in his childish error,
It would cure his whooping cough.

At the funeral Willie's mother
Smartly said to Mrs. Brown:
"Twas a chilly day for William
When the mercury went down."
—H. S. Phonograph.

Among new exchanges we note with pleasure, The Hatchet, Leavenworth, Kansas; High School Herald, Westfield, Mass; The High School News, Ishpeming, Mich; Tib Bits, Cohoes, N. Y. and the Vedette, Janesville, Wis., H. S. Cadet, Ells.

We note a poem in the Eau Claire Kodak singing of their ill treatment at Menomonie during last years football season. We can sympathize with them but had they received Stillwater treatment their feelings would be utterly inexpressible.

The editor with gladsome cry,
Exclaims, "My work is done."
The manager with weary sigh,
Explains, "My work is dun."
Olla Podrida.

The faculty of Boston University has decided to allow work on college papers to count for a required course in English. It seems strange a like provision has not been made in other colleges. As it is at present the only pay the editors get for many hours of hard work each month is a little glory and a good deal of criticism on the part of fellow students.—Ex.

Vol. No. 1 of "The High School Recorder" published by the students of the Ellsworth High School has reached our exchange table. This is a six page paper devoted to the interests of students. It is the official paper of the High School. We are pleased to place it upon our exchange list and wish it success.

"Shall I brain him?" said the hazer,
And the victim's courage fled;
"You can't, it is a Freshman,
Just hit him on the head."
—H. S. Phonograph.

Cribbing seems to be very prevalent among some exchanges. A thought that is worth reprinting, is surely worth the pains necessary to give its author due credit therefore. All great thought may belong surely and truly to him who is able to appreciate it, regardless of who first gave it speech, but it is hardly proper courtesy to appropriate the thought of another for your own uses, without giving specific credit in each case.

The above from the Leavenworth Hatchet is certainly very pertinent. We notice some of our exchanges have adopted the method of heading a column "Exchange" and under this heading publishing all exchanges promiscuously. This is hardly fair we think. Specific credit should be given where ever it is possible. There is a difference in the worth of all though and the publisher of something good should have his dues while if the unworthy should accidentally creep in, its author should bear the responsibility.

The article on the Ruffed Grouse in this issue many will recognize as characteristic of its writer Prof. F. H. King who formerly occupied the chair of Natural Science in this school.

The school has adopted a new song book for the use in the school. It is entitled "Emerson's Part Songs and Glee's for Mixed Voices." The new books prove satisfactory and enliven our chorus practice and opening exercises.

The geology class is making outside observations on the earth's structure about River Falls. Our glen, falls, mounds etc., afford a good opportunity for work of this kind. The students and professor are contemplating a trip to Hudson and St. Croix Falls for similar study.

Pres. Salisbury of the Whitewater Normal was a visitor at our school May the 5 and 6 and inspected the work of students and teachers. During his stay he favored us with an interesting talk, in which he brought forth the relative amount of pleasure derived from the possession and the acquiring of knowledge.

A New Era IN GEOGRAPHY.

Frye's Primary Geography,
SMALL 4TO CLOTH
For introduction, 60 Cents.

In three months

Frye's book attained to a larger sale and wider use than any other primary geography has ever had even after years of hard pushing. Old-fashioned ideas and the books embodying them have been routed, and American ideas, progressive, full of the red blood of our present-day school-life, have shown their superiority and have taken the lead.

The School News has an especially fine issue for March in commemoration of the dedication of a new school building.

Little Willie from his mirror
Sucked the mercury all off.
Thinking, in his childish error,
It would cure his whooping cough.

At the funeral Willie's mother
Smartly said to Mrs. Brown:
"Twas a chilly day for William
When the mercury went down."
—H. S. Phonograph.

Among new exchanges we note with pleasure, The Hatchet, Leavenworth, Kansas; High School Herald, Westfield, Mass.; The High School News, Ishpeming, Mich; Tib Bits, Cohoes, N. Y. and the Vedette, Janesville, Wis., H. S. Cadet, Ells.

We note a poem in the Eau Claire Kodak singing of their ill treatment at Menomonie during last year's football season. We can sympathize with them but had they received Stillwater treatment their feelings would be utterly inexpressible.

The editor with gladsome cry,
Exclaims, "My work is done."
The manager with weary sigh,
Explains, "My work is done."
Olla Podrida.

The faculty of Boston University has decided to allow work on college papers to count for a required course in English. It seems strange a like provision has not been made in other colleges. As it is at present the only pay the editors get for many hours of hard work each month is a little glory and a good deal of criticism on the part of fellow students.—Ex.

Vol. No. 1 of "The High School Recorder" published by the students of the Ellsworth High School has reached our exchange table. This is a six page paper devoted to the interests of students. It is the official paper of the High School. We are pleased to place it upon our exchange list and wish it success.

"Shall I brain him?" said the hazer,
And the victim's courage fled;
"You can't, it is a Freshman,
Just hit him on the head."

—H. S. Phonograph.

Cribbing seems to be very prevalent among some exchanges. A thought that is worth reprinting, is surely worth the pains necessary to give its author due credit therefore. All great thought may be long surely and truly to him who is able to appreciate it, regardless of who first gave it speech, but it is hardly proper courtesy to appropriate the thought of another for your own uses, without giving specific credit in each case.

The above from the Leavenworth Hatchet is certainly very pertinent. We notice some of our exchanges have adopted the method of heading a column "Exchange" and under this heading publishing all exchanges promiscuously. This is hardly fair we think. Specific credit should be given where ever it is possible. There is a difference in the worth of all thought and the publisher of something good should have his dues while if the unworthy should accidentally creep in, its author should bear the responsibility.
