

Jarolimek to Speak At Leadership Clinic

John J. Jarolimek, principal of the elementary school at the University of Minnesota, and Dr. E. H. Kleinpell, president of RFSC, will headline the speaking program at the leadership institute for new organization officers being sponsored by the Student Senate and the faculty personnel committee Wednesday, May 12. All new club officers, organization officers, and old and new class presidents are expected to attend.

Puff-Pant Prom, Hobo Stag Party Set for May 19

It's "Anything Can Happen" at the annual Puff-Pant Prom May 19. This year's prom is adopting something new, different, and unpredictable in nature. It will be an all-campus event sponsored by the YWCA, with a "Hobo Stag Party" for the men being planned by the faculty men.

The way it looks now the women will have a chili supper in Hathorn Hall at five p.m. Then they will scramble and dress for the grand march and judging of costumes in the lounge of Hathorn Hall at seven p.m. After that a talent show is planned, with skits, outside talent, and various other stunts to be included. Then who knows: "Anything Can Happen."

Ticket go on sale for the Puff-Pant Prom in South Hall Monday, May 17. They'll cost fifty cents for a single and 98 cents for a couple. The ticket price includes the chili supper and the prom itself.

For the men, May 19 is old clothes night at the "Hobo Stag Party" in the cafeteria with supper at six p.m., followed by a stag party. Before this a volleyball game will take place in the gym.

Reviewing the plans for the Puff-Pant Prom and the Hobo Stag Party, Dr. Dorothy J. Lipp, Dean of Women, commented, "Just what do men do at a stag party? Well, whatever it is, when they get tired of doing it they might be a little curious about the Puff-Pant Prom. Spring is here, the sky's the limit. Anything can happen!"

Newman's Will Hold New Style Auction

A variety auction, something new on RFSC's campus, will be held, all day Tuesday, May 11 by the Newman club on the lawn between North and South Halls.

Sealed bids will be accepted all day on any of the many items on display. Bids will be opened at four o'clock and the items will go to the highest bidders.

Registration at 4:30 in the auditorium will begin the institute program, followed by an introductory meeting at 5:30 and a program by the Toastmasters called "The Meeting Will Come To Order." Meanwhile, group advisers will meet in 120N.

Supper in the cafeteria will be served the group from 6:30 to 8 p.m., after which Dr. Kleinpell will deliver some short remarks and Jarolimek will speak on "The Responsibilities of a Leader." Jarolimek is a graduate of RFSC and taught at the campus school in 1950-51.

A general meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in 121S, followed by four sectional meetings, for presidents, vice presidents, secretaries, and treasurers of organizations. Moderating at the sectional meetings will be the officers of the Student Senate. The Institute will close with a summary meeting at 8:45.

Purpose of the institute, first of its kind to be held at River Falls, is to acquaint next year's organization officers with their duties. Topics to be discussed will include responsibilities of officers, parliamentary procedure at meetings, and how to plan and carry out programs and duties of special committees.

New Agronomy Building Construction Begins June 15

Above is a pen-and-ink sketch of the new RFSC agronomy building, construction on which is to begin June 15. The sketch was drawn by Thorvald E. Thoreson, agriculture instructor.

Construction of a new agronomy building on the River Falls State College Campus is scheduled to begin June 15, according to Dr. E. H. Kleinpell, RFSC president. Cost of the building is not yet known.

Bids for construction of the 5600 square feet structure were released last week. The one-story brick building without basement will be erected northwest of the industrial arts building, where the skywatch building (formerly used as the trailer court utility building) has stood.

An agronomy laboratory, replacing the wood agronomy building between the campus apartments and the college barns, will occupy the southeast corner of the new agronomy building. A dairy lab, to be used for testing dairy products from the college farm, will be located in the northwest corner of the building. A soils lab will occupy the southwest corner; between it and the dairy lab will be a large classroom which can be divided by a sliding wall.

Five faculty offices will be located on the east side of the new agronomy building, for RFSC agriculture instructors: John May, Arthur Johnson, Thorvald Thoreson, Melvin Wall, Marvin Thompson, and Russell Gerber. Two laboratories and a storage room complete the interior plans.

Meletean Publication Date to Be After June 1

According to the Dairyland Press, New Richmond, publishers of the 1954 Meletean, the RFSC yearbook will not be published by June 1. Although all picture engravings, done by the Green Engraving Company of St. Paul are completed, no written copy for the Meletean had been submitted as of May 1.

Dairyland Press did not say how soon after June 1 the Meletean would be published, although it takes about two weeks to print the book and ten days to bind it. But co-editor Bill Gotz reports that the Meletean may possibly be ready by June 4, the last day of final exams.

Next Plays: 'See How They Run', 'Bell, Book & Candle'

by Marilyn Murphy

Two student-directed plays will be presented this week and next in North Hall auditorium. Margaret Helmer, senior, will direct "See How They Run" and Herb Voss, junior, will direct "Bell, Book and Candle".

Ruth Stolpe, Rusty Titel, and Ronnie Wunrow in a scene from the farce, "See How They Run", to be presented in the college auditorium Thursday, May 13, at 8 p.m. Margaret Helmer, senior, is directing the production.

A chorus girl turned minister's wife, her handsome actor friend, and a village spinster are some of the principals in the forthcoming production of "See How They Run," which is to be presented at 8 p.m., Thursday, May 13.

An intriguing farce, the play takes place in England during World War II, with the entire action at Merton-cum-Middlewick, a vicarage.

Presiding over the vicarage is the Rev. Lionel Toop, played by Bob Day. Assisting him in his task is his wife, Penelope, who deviates considerably from the austerity of the typical minister's spouse. Ruth Stolpe plays the part of Penelope. Rusty Titel, portraying a former actor friend of Mrs. Toop, is cast as Lance-Corporal Clive Winton. Miss Skillon, played by Yvonne Olson, is an unhappy spinster, ruined when the "light of her life", the Rev., was snatched from her by the young actress.

Also in the play are Eddie Miller, portraying the Bishop of Lax, Don Richards as Police Sergeant Towers, Ron Wunrow, playing a visitor to the rectory who becomes a helpless victim of circumstance, and a German prisoner escapee, played by Roger Frank. Ida, the maid, is played by Maggie Helmer, who is also directing the play.

Stage manager for "See How They Run" is John Glassburner. "Bell, Book and Candle," to be presented Thursday, May 20, at 8 p.m., was written by noted playwright, John van Druten, who wrote the comedy out of a "witch's brew." Stirring the brew is Dorothy Binkowski, as Gillian Holroyd, a modern-day witch, who uses as her hostel a New York apartment house. Her "victim" is Sheperd Henderson, a young publisher who lives in the apartment above her.

The part of Shep is played by Herb Voss. Every witch must have her familiar spirit. In this case, it's Gillian's pet cat, Pyewacket. Her first meeting with Mr. Henderson is affected by her eccentric "Aunt Queenie", who breaks into his apartment in order to practice several of her tricks. This second witch is played by Betty DeGidio.

Gillian's brother Nicky, also a magic enthusiast, is played by Bob Spaete. He uses his magical ability, which seems to be characteristic of the Holroyd family, to collaborate with Rodney Redlitch, portrayed by Rolland Groethe, in writing his new book of magic. All of the cast, including director Herb Voss have played in previous RFSC productions with the exception of Betty DeGidio, who is playing her first role at River Falls.

Stage manager for the production is Rolland Groethe.

The Editor Speaks

The Foundation Fund

An open letter on the front page of the Student Voice of December 20, 1948, written by the president of the Student Senate, listed the needs for a River Falls fieldhouse and outlined the plan for getting one. Briefly, it was this: RFSC would raise $250,000, and the state legislature would match that.

"The goal is not too high", said the letter. ". . . if only 5,000 persons pledged ten dollars a year for five years, the goal would be met."

The five years are up. Needless to say, the goal has not been met. For from it, in fact; the fund has not reached $30,000.

Why did we fail? The original plan looks plausible, when you read it, but something went wrong. It is perhaps easy to think of reasons why the Fieldhouse Foundation Fund did not achieve its original goal, but we're not interested in doing that. What we are interested in is the new direction the foundation has taken since it became evident that the goal of a fieldhouse was way beyond its reach within a reasonable number of years.

The word "fieldhouse" has been dropped from the Foundation's name. The $30,000 is still with us, of course; part of it is on loan to help the college forward its expansion program.

We're still raising money for the foundation fund, even though we can't see a fieldhouse in its future. We're helping to raise money for goals we can obtain immediately, like the football scoreboard that was bought last year, and money to help furnish the new student union, which is where the proceeds of last week's foundation drive are going.

We'll get our fieldhouse. The state of Wisconsin will be paying for most of it, and so we'll have to wait our turn in the state college building program. And meanwhile, we can use the energy and money we give to the foundation for the realization of immediate improvements.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

Spring is traditionally a time for planning; just as fall is characteristically a time for harvest. The relationship between these customary activities and what I'm about to suggest is no more than an analogous one, but the analogy is, I think, apt.

On occasion, persons associated with the institution (including the Editor of the Voice, as I recall) have spoken about various kinds of "needs" evidenced by the college. These "needs" have had something to do, at times, with "culture", or some popularization of this nature. The nest of the Falcon might be better feathered, these comments have suggested, were "more cultural opportunities" prevalent.

To such suggestions my query is this. Might not a film group, organized on campus, bring programs to the local theatre which might contribute to the broader life-experience implied and/or stated in the suggestions? I'll testify that films of excellence can satisfy some "needs" for recreation.

I understand, further, that the manager of the local theatre would welcome an opportunity to participate in a program of this nature.

And finally, in direct violation of the fundamental principles learned at considerable personal expense while I was garbed in olive drab, I volunteer my help in promoting such a program. I do this out of personal motives of self interest; so long have I "responded" to the action of the classical horse-opera that many of my close acquaintances ask if I have become gun-shy and perfect strangers often stop me in public places to offer aid on the assumption that I am a rehabilitation case with recurring combat fatigue.

To complete the circle, spring, as I have said, is a time of planning; it is usually followed by fall. And in the fall the Falcons come back to their roost.

Sincerely yours,
B. L. McCarthy

Individuals, Clubs Provide Many Scholarships for RFSC Students

by Sue Chinnock

River Falls State College Annual Honors Day will be held this year on Thursday, May 27. On that day outstanding students on campus will be given special awards and scholarships. Those chosen to receive these scholarships are picked on various bases, depending upon the particular award.

The Augusta M. Thomas Scholarship is given each year to an outstanding junior in the Department of Elementary Education. This award pays the student's fees for the year following the presentation of the scholarship.

The Class of 1924 Award is given to a junior student. This also pays the student's fees for the following year.

The Business and Professional Women's Club each year awards a scholarship (also consisting of the following year's fees) to a freshman girl outstanding in scholarship, personality, and character.

A Faculty-Alumni Scholarship is awarded to an outstanding sophomore student.

An award of $25 per term of the following year is presented to an outstanding junior girl by the AAUW.

A sophomore student who has contributed greatly to the democratic atmosphere of the college is awarded the Langwear Scholarship. This student is chosen on the basis of scholarship, leadership, and need.

Sigma Chi Sigma also presents an award each year of fees for the following year. It is given to an outstanding freshman girl enrolled in a four-year course.

A junior student who possesses outstanding qualifications in leadership and scholarship is chosen each year by the YMCA to receive their award of fees for the following year.

Chosen on the basis of scholarship, leadership, and character, one junior each year is awarded the Faculty Women's Scholarship, also consisting of next year's fees.

The E. H. Kleinpell Award, of incidental fees for the following year, is presented each year to the junior student, chosen by the Student Senate, who is considered to have contributed the most to the institution for the year.

A scholarship is also awarded, by the local chapter of the ME NC, to one high school graduate from the surrounding area. This award pays the first year's fees of a high school graduate who intends to enroll here at River Falls State College and major in music.

Young Ewe with Sheep-Shape Ideas About Shearing Leads Black Buddy to Dudgery, Disrobing

by Bo Peep

In the merry month of May down at Farmer Brown's it was once again time for sheep-shearing. "I'll do it this year," said the milkmaid. "No, let me," said the hired man, sharpening his pitchfork. Farmer Brown pacified them both by letting each do half the work.

Out in the sheepfold, things were as usual. The sheep were, for the most part, complacently readying themselves for the annual shearing. They were confining their strenuous activities to mild games of "run, sheep, run" and sheephead. The ewes were knitting little garments; the rams were polishing their horns.

All but one, that is. He was the proverbial black sheep, and he had different ideas. He didn't see any reason why old Farmer Brown and his crew should shear the sheep and take their wool—why shouldn't the sheep do what they liked with their fleece? So he went to a young ewe, the chosen leader of the sheep, and told her what he thought.

She listened politely enough, but bleated when he finished, "Well, Blackie, that's a good idea, but I don't think you're seeing it from their viewpoint too, are you? After all, we must consider everybody's feelings on the matter, and besides isn't it nice to keep old traditions on the farm and have our annual shearing? We have had this now for 17 years, and it'd be nice to keep things sheep-shape the way they are now, wouldn't it Blackie, huh?"

"Baa, baa," said the black sheep, "what do you care? You haven't any wool anyway." And he went to rouse the others.

This was not an easy matter. Several of them suspecting that the black sheep bathed in sheep dip occasionally, wouldn't even speak to him, so he couldn't ask them about the matter. Others had had the wool pulled over their eyes and couldn't tell right from wrong.

A red-haired sheep told the black sheep that he couldn't give an opinion without consulting the young ewe first, but he was sure he'd agree with her, because they were from the same sheep-pen.

Well anyway, the black sheep soon saw that he wasn't going to get anywhere with the sheep, so he went directly to Farmer Brown and complained about the shearing, and Farmer Brown said sure, they didn't need to be sheared, and besides it took too much time and money to do it every year, and enough wool

CRITIC'S CORNER

'The Glass Menagerie'

by Bob Krueger

Some felt sad, some depressed, and a few were melancholy as the "Glass Menagerie" ended. And some were disappointed, like a child who blows a bubble into the air, only to see it burst and fade into nothingness; unable to grasp it or remember how beautiful it was. The almost perfect acting and flawless delivery made the memory-play reach professional standards.

Thelma Erickson Willink, as Amanda Wingfield, the domineering mother, performed her role with superb character development and the entire play virtually revolved around her. With perfect flexibility and timing she artistically cued the audience to the varying moods of the play's flash-scenes without exerting their imaginations.

Director Betty Doolittle as Laura was convincing. Laura's extreme unawareness to life was a bit hard to accept even though she lived in a world of glass animals. At times, the character of Laura lacked the intensity to convey fully the intended meaning of the playwright, Tennessee Williams. Not serious enough to be psychopathic, to wispy to be "real" — Mrs. Doolittle's Laura failed to produce the deep sense of tragedy that the role demanded.

John Bos, as her brother, did a good job of narrating. His philosophical tones did not always meet with the situation, but his speeches were clear and easily understood.

Bob Doolittle, in his first role at RFSC, proved to be especially interesting. As the glib, self-assured "gentleman caller", Doolittle did a remarkable job with the important supporting role. His surface falseness was justly overshadowed by the deep sincerity he showed towards Laura.

The "Glass Menagerie", though thoroughly enjoyed by the audience, will not be long remembered because of its intangible plot and nirvana ending.

Wrestling's Debut Disappointing

by Ronnie Jensen

In the first venture of its kind on the campus of RFSC, the "R" Club introduced professional wrestling to all interested individuals. The turnout was larger than expected, but the general feeling seems to be that the average student wouldn't walk across the street to see the "grunt and groan" boys again. While the wrestlers attempted to look as ferocious as a bunch of lions uncaged after being imprisoned, this writer felt that the show was below par to say the least.

In the opener, a one fall or half hour time limit affair, Dennis Clary battled the villain Angelo Poffo to a draw. The two men moved their activity outside the ring towards the close of the match to stir up the fans for the main event which followed. Moochy & Haggerty were Villians

Pulling practically every trick in the book, the combo of Johnny Moochy and Hard-Boiled Haggerty were disqualified after about 55 minutes of their Australian Tag match with Ray McClarty and the huge Swede, Karl Karlsson. Moochy pinned McClarty for the first fall, but the tables were turned (I mean that's the way the script read) 20 minutes later as Moochy found himself down for the three second count.

By lengthening out the rope in their corner, Moochy and Haggerty were able to reach farther along the ring to touch the hand of their partner. Another trick was to always work McClarty or Karlsson into their corner so that the two of them could work over their adversary. When they took to breaking chairs over heads, the referee, Jack Morgan, figured it was time to stop the mayhem and declared Karlsson and er the smoke had cleared away, McClarty the winners.

The only comment by "R" Club president, Reg Hansen, afterwards was that the venture was a "financial success". We are certainly glad that the Foundation will benefit from this affair as most students could just as well have been spending their time elsewhere. For our money, wrestling is better on television, because we are farther away from it.

6-1 in Opener

River Falls opened its 1954 baseball season with a 6 to 1 victory over Eau Claire on Thursday, April 29th.

The game was played under cold adverse weather conditions, but it didn't seem to bother the Falcon pitcher, Dick Passon, who went all the way for the victors. Bridges was the losing pitcher and gave up a total of 7 hits.

First blood was drawn by River Falls in the second inning as they scored two runs on a walk, a hit, and a timely two-base blow by Luebker. The Falcons also scored runs in the 4th, 5th and 8th innings for a total of six runs. River Falls hitters were Burgoyne and Passon with two hits each, Rudesill, Miller, and Luebker with single hits. Eau Claire's lone run was scored in the fourth on two errors and a hit.

River Falls will play 11 games this spring. They will consist of four double-headers and three single games. The next three games will be played at home. A single game with Stout on May 5 and a double-header with La Crosse on May 7.

GOLF COURSE OPEN;

ADMISSION FREE

If and when the unseasonal weather clears up, many of the students of the college will be making treks to the local golf course. President Kleinpell called attention this past week to the fact that RFSC students can play on the course free of charge, by showing their activity ticket. "A good deal", is the way President Kleinpell summed up the situation.

Geologists Take Tour of State

The advanced geology class and Robert Polk, instructor, spent the week-end on a field trip through various sections of Wisconsin. They traveled down the Mississippi River Valley as far as Prairie Du Chien where they cut over to the military ranges where they saw the Cave of the Mounds. They traveled to the Terminal Moraine which is the edge of land as far as the glacier flowed. They came back up the Wisconsin River, and saw the sand dunes where Wisconsin cactus grows.

Saturday night they stayed at Wisconsin Dells and early Sunday morning they made an intensive study of the Baraboo Ranges.

Their trip came to a close Sunday afternoon with a boat ride on the upper Dells.

Those who went on the field trip are: Paul Felsheim, Gail Gibbon, Beulah Dahlberg, Sally Dickenson, Berkley Larson, Clair Richardson, Alex Brietkreitz, Larry Vollrath, and Ted Ver Haagh.
