Students Hold Banquet in Cafeteria on Wednesday Evening

Sixty-nine men from the Agriculture department enjoyed the annual banquet held in the college cafeteria last Thursday evening.

Dr. Hrudka, the principal speaker of the evening, entertained by relating personal incidents of his career since the time he was a student at this institution fifteen years ago.

President J. H. Ames gave a contrast of conditions before and after the war.

The school annual for 1932 will contain 216 pages which is eight pages more than any previous edition has ever had. The increased size is due to the larger classes. Every student is pictured in the new Meletean.

"The Meletean staff has been unusually successful this year in obtaining good snap-shots." A large "snap-shot" section of students and their activities will be included.

Certain sections will receive more space than in previous Meleteans due to their unusual activity and achievement. The art theme will be modernistic this year as compared to the historical theme of the last yearbook of the college.

This relief work has met a very great need this year. The Women's League in connection with the Washington Bi-centennial have also purchased two trees—a cut leaf birch and a purple birch. These trees will be planted on the north campus directly in front of the college office.

Is Present Educational System Adequate?

WHAT does education do for us? What should it do? Someone has said, "Education is life". Another has said, "Education is preparation for a richer life". Still another has said, "Education is fitting one for a position." The latter, I am afraid, has been probably the nearest explanation of our educational systems. As long as there were jobs for those fitted for them; things seemed gay, and educational institutions were lauded.

I am sure most of us would agree, if we were honest with ourselves, that the claim of more salary and easier work has been one of the primary motives in most educational careers. During the growth of our nation men trained to do certain tasks especially well were lauded and compensated highly because of their great help in mass production and the consequent lining of capitalist pocketbooks. Our development as a nation to which we point with great pride was characterized by high praise, high salary, and newspaper space to the man who sewed on the most coat sleeves in a day, to the man who nailed the most soles in a day, to the man who painted the most car fenders in a day, to the man who won the greatest number of court cases in a given time, to the man who husked the most corn in a day. In close harmony, our schools have aimed to train people for such jobs, turning out individuals with feelings for hurry, hurry, hurry to make a large number of commodities. As a result we have an educational system built on old needs, trying to turn out individuals who have altogether different positions to fill.

Every time graduation comes around, we have more graduates with proportionately fewer openings. This situation is very likely to continue. Since there is overproduction in agricultural products and manufactured articles, what we need is not more specialists inoculated with production fanaticism, but specialists desirous of equalizing distribution, specialists on knowledge of how to use leisure time. These latter specialists are necessary in order that humanity will develop yearnings for things farther removed from mere animal levels---feelings of dissatisfaction until neighbors are enjoying the same comforts as we are, uneasiness unless we are carrying our share of the society's burden, and desires in life that will make artists of us in whatever task we may be employed, be that task ditch-digging, painting, teaching, farming, preaching, acting, or what not.

How close to an ideal of some sort is our educational system measuring up? Is the attitude of present educational systems to fit the school for the individual or the individual to fit the school? Can we expect much relief from dissatisfied lives unless some changes are made? Can we expect to face the future blindly and keep on training specialists, trusting that Providence will somehow find room for them and feed and clothe them just as the "lilies of the field are clothed" or the "fowls of the air fed"? J. D.

"It is the art of living, the road to success, and has been, everywhere, since the world began." Moore

Other Opportunities in Music Work

THE River Falls air has been filled with music these past weeks and with the discussions of this important field of education. Something worthwhile comes out of both of these conditions.

No one can deny the value of the music contest to the hundreds of boys and girls who participated in it. No one can gainsay the value students get from membership in the college music organizations.

To quote a Minneapolis writer on the subject:

"No one can avail himself of the facilities for musical education thus afforded without vastly enlarging his own musical intelligence, and broadening his capacity to understand and enjoy the richest treasures of the composer's art. If crooning and jazz occupy the greater part of our radio hours, it is, in the judgment of those who come most directly into contact with the public, because they answer the demands of the popular taste. If we desire better programs, we must do our part in educating the public to understand and appreciate the sort of music which we ourselves demand. It is all a matter of education. A chorus to sing the finest works of Verdi or Gounod may be picked up on the streets of Naples or Florence at an hour's notice. The street musicians of Vienna or Berlin are familiar with the scores of Beethoven and Wagner. The capacity of the American public to appreciate the masterpiece is not all students, but its education has been neglected."

Yet not all students have the opportunity to appreciate the value of music because they do not care to avail themselves of chances open to them or because they have no opportunity to join such an organization. Why could not the college have a chorus open to all who care to sing the well known classics and favorites?

The St. Olaf choir practices an hour a day. If this bigger and better River Falls chorus did the same, it would soon be one of the important musical organizations of the state. One hundred voices singing because they loved to sing! One hundred members or more building a cultural background! There are leaders. All that is needed is action.

"The real joy of living consists in making one's mind a pleasant place to spend one's leisure moments." Anonymous

The Teacher's Creed

EDWIN OSGOOD GROVER has very effectively composed what he terms the teacher's creed. It summarizes very concisely just what is expected of the teacher.

The teacher's creed is given below:

"I believe in boys and girls, the men and women of a great tomorrow; that whatsoever the boy soweth the man shall reap. I believe in the curse of ignorance, in the efficiency of schools, in the dignity of teaching, and in the joy of serving others. I believe in wisdom as revealed in human lives as well as in the pages of a printed book, not so much by precept as by example; in the ability to work with the hands as well as to think with the head; in everything that makes life large and lovely. I believe in beauty in the school room, in the home, in daily life and in out-of-doors. I believe in laughter, in love, in faith, in all ideals and distant hopes that lure us on. I believe that every hour of every day we receive a just award for all we are and all we do. I believe in the present and its opportunities, in the future and its promises and in the divine joy of living".

Student Opinion

"Say, Bill, what time is it? Has the bell rung yet?" Such questions are continually being heard in the men's union. Yet, the teachers complain about students being late to class.

A bell or clock could be arranged for without much trouble or expense. It would be a great favor to the men and teachers as well. —T. W. T.

Just as a specialist is a man "away from home" so is a high class orchestra a "group of musicians" away from home.

Are college students of such a nervous temperament that they enjoy a good orchestra more when they pay seventy-five cents admission than when they pay twenty-five cents admission for the same orchestra?

After a little investigation, it can easily be shown that other groups who "can secure the services of various orchestras" have not done so. Probably because they couldn't.

Further investigation will show that good orchestras are usually retained by ballrooms in the large cities. The public does not tire easily, it seems, of good music.

I think the orchestra's work for the college dances has been appreciated because of its lively, jolly, consistent entertainment.

Professional Questions

Of What Value is Musical Training for the Prospective Teacher?

Many an otherwise efficient teacher has had to pass up a good position in teaching because he or she was not prepared to teach music.

There can be no doubt in the minds of those whose business it is to find a position for a prospective graduate teacher that his or her ability to handle some music creditably well is an asset in the teacher's favor.

Whether it be teaching grade music or the conducting of the high school glee clubs, orchestra or band, the fact that a teacher can handle one or more of these activities makes him a valuable member of any school system, large or small.

There is absolutely no excuse for any graduating teacher of the present, finding him or herself lacking in the fundamentals of music, theoretically or from a practical viewpoint. Every faculty is at his command and every student should take advantage of it.

The day is coming, in fact it is practically here, when every teacher, especially in the grades, will be compelled to have a thorough knowledge of both practical and theoretical music to present in their grade.

Methods do not matter so very much. Results are what count. Any method that will put itself across and imbue a teacher with so much enthusiasm that she will attempt music in a school that never has had music, is a good method.

The Teachers College must surround the students with a musical atmosphere, make the way both tangible and logical, and above all create a wish and a will to do.

The Three Arts

By M.L.W.

The piano recital given by the younger pupils of Cara Wharton last Wednesday evening was much appreciated by all who attended.

The program included solos, duets, and two piano numbers played by children of the ages from six to eleven years. These selections were supplemented by a duet by Miss Wharton and Christi Njos, a two-piano number by Rucille Wallin and Christi Njos, and solos by Blanche Harding, Rucille Wallin, and Ardelle Hamlett. All of the numbers were plainly the result of much diligent and patient work on the part of both Miss Wharton and her pupils.

Ladies and Gentlemen

IN BUSINESS AND POLITICS Be "up on your toes," not just "taking your ease".

Foppish, effeminate manners are not recommended, but good manners are courteous consideration of other people's interests and feelings.

Customers, superior officers, and employees prefer an executive whose manners consider his customers', his company's, and his own.

Master etiquette as an asset, but submerge it beneath other more apparent qualifications with a straight forward attitude and a simple manner.

New Books Worth Reading

The Everlasting Struggle by Johan Bojer

By Alfred Nelson

THE struggles and misfortunes of the lower class of Norwegian fishermen become very realistic in Johan Bojer's "The Everlasting Struggle". The story would be much more interesting to read if the author would have made a few departures from the routine struggling. The hardships of these unfortunate people are carried so far that it makes the characters seem inhuman. The book can perhaps be compared with O. E. Rolvaag's novel "Hudson's Bay" which depicts the hardships of the Norwegian immigrants in America. The latter book is much easier reading because there are a few breaks in the hardships of the characters wherein the reader gets a little relish.

Paal Flata is a poor fisherman who just manages to earn enough to support his family which consists of his wife Lisbet, the children Anna, Martha, Per and Gjert, together with Martin a little crippled boy whom they have adopted. The eldest daughter Anna marries a rich farmer but misfortune soon overtakes them and they soon become so poor that they even have to beg food from Paal and Lisbet. The boy Per eventually becomes the bread-winner but he finds it a huge task to keep the family from starvation. Misfortune overtakes them on every hand and the story ends shortly after Paal meets with an accident and is killed.

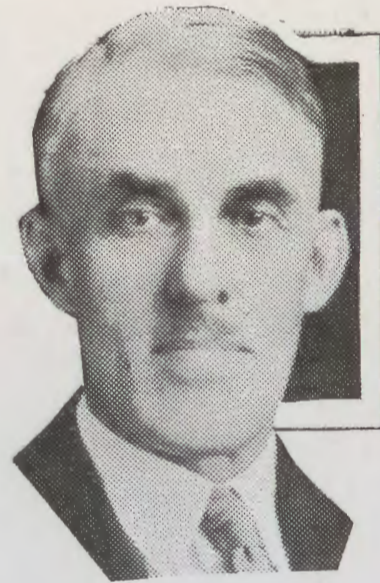

The book would be more interesting if it had some kind of a division. There is no index and the chapters are simply strung along as if it were a history.

This is not the kind of a book that will appeal to the majority of readers because it is rather monotonous. However it is different from most novels and it is a story which makes you wonder how it will end.

President J. H. Ames Gives Sound Counsel

By President Jesse H. Ames

IN this time of general distress and discouragement, we are questioning the value of many of our institutions and activities. This is a time for making new evaluations. There are those who declare that American schools are failures, and those who appear to desire to withdraw support from educational programs.

President Jesse H. Ames

The failures in our society today may not be charged to our schools and colleges nor to educational leaders. For the past generation leadership in this country has been in the hands of the industrialists. The present collapse of our economic system cannot be laid at the doors of schools and colleges; neither can it be charged up to the failure of governmental agencies, national, state and local.

From the beginnings of our Republic, universal education has been one of our ideals. George Washington in his farewell address declared education to be of primary importance to a free and democratic people: "In proportion as the structure of a Government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened." If the rank and file of our people cannot think for themselves, then must we always be the victims of whatever leadership dominates the hour, whatever appeal of the demagogue captivates a fickle public opinion.

Education

Is Great Undertaking

We must look upon public education as society's greatest undertaking. We must press forward at this time with increasing insistence upon school efficiency. Let this be a time of testing and proving; and where there is waste, extravagance, inefficiency, over-expansion, let the pruning knife be used. On the other hand, this must not be a time for curtailment of educational opportunities. Schools must not be closed; the efficiency of equipment and teaching staff must be maintained. Boys and girls who have capacity for higher education must be afforded opportunities to secure such training. Ways and means must be found to enable promising young men and women to develop latent talents that they may provide the intelligent leadership which present problems demand.

Education

Needs Moral Support

There may be a disposition in these times on the part of some of those who are charged with the responsibility of providing educational opportunities for young people, to withhold the necessary encouragement and support. At no time in our history has it been more important that young men and women secure the necessary education and training to prepare them for a vocation and for an intelligent citizenship.

In the Educational News

FRIENDLY chats over the old back fence still constitute one of the best means by which newcomers in any American community may become acquainted with their neighbors, according to the results of a sociological study recently completed by two members of the sociology department at the University of Wisconsin.

That the neighborhood still constitutes one of the main ways in which newcomers may make contacts with local friends in the average American community of today is revealed in the study. Of the total number of newcomers interviewed, 72 replied that they found their new friends in their own neighborhood, becoming acquainted with them through social calls or "chummy" talks in their yards.

The largest number of personal friendships grew up through business or occupation contacts, according to the study, which showed that 81 newcomers to the city made friends in this manner. The church helped 55 other newcomers to find new friends, 17 found friends through their lodge, 19 through their clubs, while 30 were able to find friends with whom they had become acquainted in their former home community.

Falcons to Play Concordia Nine

"Comets" Will Play Return Game With River Falls Here Monday

River Falls plays Concordia college nine in a return game at Ramer Field, May 16. The "Comets" expect to erase their defeat at the hands of the Falcons earlier in the season.

Just which team will be the lucky winner is hard to say. Both teams did some heavy sticking in their previous game and they both feel that they can win.

Both teams have played several more games and it should be close. The players of both teams feel their chances of winning are good and the home-run fans will be out in large numbers to root for their favorites.

Long Shots

By ZEKE

Our boys are definitely out of the running in the baseball race. Guess they had putrid luck at St. Peter.

Kotleski, Braun and Helixon smacked the St. Peter pitchers all over the lot, but they couldn't score.

Braun almost duplicated Helixon's trick. He almost got home on a three-bagger, but the catcher caught the ball and said "nix".

Had tough luck at golf course Sunday. Went out with a bunch but about ten minutes after we got there we got snowed in. Drove the ball across the gully on the ice.

St. Thomas beat St. Olaf. They should with the hurler they have!

Believe me our boys were hitting 'em up north there on Friday. Kotleski knocked out a sweet three-bagger. Then Larson drove a stinger down the third base line. St. Peter's third baseman must have been a magician or awfully lucky to make that double play.

Ole Clafin pitched entire game for River Falls up there. He allowed 8 hits.

Muck-wuck--the game that is played over by the tennis courts--formerly called horseshoe. The proper uniform for this game in wet weather is a swimming suit, so the mud off the horseshoes won't stick to one's clothing.

Falcons Lose in Opening Game at Tournament

Gustavus Adolphus College Defeats River Falls 6-2 in First Game

River Falls lost the opening game of the Minnesota State College baseball conference to Gustavus Adolphus by a score of 6 to 2.

The five inning game did not permit the Falcon nine much chance of getting started. In the first inning the Gustavus Adolphus team got two runs and four more in the second. After several attempts the Falcons rallied in the fifth inning. The rally was not long enough as they only received two runs before the third out.

Gust. Adolphus 2 4 0 0 0--6
St. Thomas defeated St. Olaf by a margin of two runs.

St. John's and Augsburg played a close game which was tied in the first and fourth and the Augsburg team was nosed out in the last inning.

With the Falcons eliminated from the tournament, interest has been lost for fans here. The rain Saturday forced a postponement of play to May 16. On that date Gustavus Adolphus plays St. Johns and Concordia meets St. Thomas. The finals will be played on the same afternoon.

LaDusire's Team Wins Opening Game

"LaDusire's Wild Men" won the opening game of the kittenball league Tuesday evening by defeating "McChesney's Mudcats" by a score of 6 to 1.

"Comet" Team Meets Falcons

Concordia College Tennis Team to Play at River Falls on May 17

The Falcon tennis team will meet the Concordia team in a return match here on May 17.

The Falcon team expects to make a stronger showing and have high hopes of defeating the "Comets" with the additional practice they have had.

If Christianson continues in his early season form he should score his number of points in the singles and add a substantial number of points in the doubles. Ray Penn and James Deringer have been working on their games and may be counted upon to secure additional points in their games. Smith, Keeler and Pratt are improving and fans feel that the Falcons will gain a victory over the Concordia team.

Play Day Held in South Hall Gym Saturday

Six High Schools Send Representatives to Take Part in Games

The first annual Play Day of W. A. A. was held in south hall gym May 7th. The following schools each sent four representatives: River Falls, Hudson, New Richmond, Ellsworth, Hammond and Baldwin. Spring Valley, Prescott, Roberts and Woodville were invited but were unable to attend.

The day was begun by registration from 9 to 9:30. Each girl was assigned to a color team. It was not competition between schools as each of the four girls was on a different team.

Play Games in Forenoon

The forenoon was spent by playing baseball and having relay races of different kinds. Each team was given 3 points for winning first place in these races, 2 points for second, and 1 point for third.

Before they were allowed to go down to get their dinner the members of each group had to compose a song and sing it. Some very interesting songs were sung; all of them had the same plea, "When do we eat?"

During the lunch hour they sang songs. Each school sang its own school song. The instructors each gave a short talk.

Each Group Presents Stunt

Immediately after lunch each group presented a stunt. One group have a boxing match, one had a baseball game played on their knees, one had a society meeting, and one had a play, "A. B. C.". The "A. B. C." got the prize for the most comical, the baseball game was decided to be the most original.

After the student volley ball games the teachers challenged any seven students to a game. The teachers were the umpires, and they made the rules so they won both games.

Immediately after the volley ball games, the girls went in swimming. Judging from the screams of delight, they all had a good time.

At three o'clock they all trooped back to South Hall to say goodbye. Before leaving they sang two farewell songs and gave some yells.

Rural Life Notes

The Rural Life Club held a picnic in the park Thursday evening. It ended rather disastrously when they found themselves locked in the lodge where they had taken refuge from the rain. The party was the result of an annual custom by which the first ten teachers signing contracts give the Club a picnic. The group included Doris Anderson, Chairman, Helen Steiro, Alice Anderson, Aletha Stebnitz, Alice Janisch, Shirley Cowen, Marian Scheide, Olive Moline, Charles Udelhofen and Mildred Johnson.

ANNUAL RINGS

Tonight my life seems placid as this tree
Whose bark my fingers touch reflectively.
I know within this tree its annual rings
Could tell me how much growth each season brings.
I'm thankful that my spirit has no growth-rings of its own;
I couldn't bear to realize how little I have grown.

He golfed but never more than 18 holes at a time.
He got at least eight hours' sleep every night.
He never smoked, drank or lost his temper.
He did his daily dozen daily.
He was all set to live to be a hundred—
The funeral will be next Wednesday. He had forgotten about trains at grade crossings!

Frank W. Simmonds Speaks to Teachers

"If an Agassiz finds pleasure in digging among fossils in order that he may interpret the great story of prehistoric life; if a Thoreau by Waldon Pond is delighted with his studies of bugs and beetles; if a John Burroughs, on his little patch of ground in the valley of the Mohawk, glories in his life among the birds and bees; if a Luther Burbank is enraptured with his work of transforming a worthless desert cactus into an edible fruit, or in producing sweeter rose or fairer lily; if these and other workers, whose name are legion, revel in the love of their work--then by what terms shall we designate the joy of what should be the teacher's, who works not with mere fossils, nor with bugs or beetles, nor with birds, or flowers, but with the child who is at once, the most wonderful of God's creation. Yes, it's a wonderful thing to be a teacher; it's a great thing to teach a school."

Frank W. Simmonds.

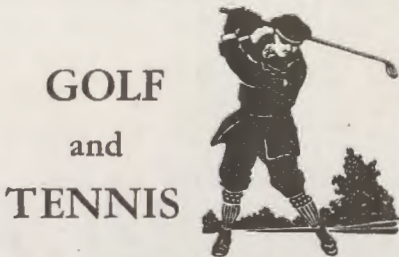

Mark Saxton was speaker at the Rural Life Club last Thursday evening.
